CHARLEVOIX COUNTY HERALD

G. A. Lisk, Publisher
ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR

Entered at the postoffice at East Jordan, Michigan, as second class mail matter.

Who Are They?

The spectacle of an alleged "primary reform" ticket in this county without any semblance of organization is enough to disgust any man who ever cast a vote. The Boyne City convention placed in nomination a bunch of candidates and, as yet, these men have not been officially notified of such action. A number of these had no knowledge whatever that their names were to be used and are very emphatic in their refusal to allow their names to appear on such a conglomerated, unprincipled ticket. They are in questionable company and thoroughly realize it. They have had no opportunity to resign and have made a strong effort to find out whom to notify, without avail. If their names are placed on the so-called "Primary Reform ticket," without a chance to resign we predict one of the liveliest scraps ever seen in this neck of the wood. You can nominate a man without his knowledge or consent but when it comes to forcing him to run for office on a ticket it's another question. There was never a bigger injustice done to the cause of primary reform than when a bunch of sore-headed, would-be politicians met under the disguise of a democrat convention and after nominating themselves (after a row) placed a few good democrats, who were not present, in the hopes that they could command their votes.

Inconsistent Ravings.

The old chestnut ravings of certain people in the county alleging unnecessary expenses to the tax payers is now out. It's an old time dodge to win votes but, unfortunately the average voter is next to the scheme. The expenses of the county are higher this year than ever before, no one will deny this—but why not be honest in the matter and tell all the reasons. Why not tell that the smallpox bills this year are larger than ever before, aggregating $5,654.31.

As for the running expenses of the county they are less this year than last as the records show.

As for our county officials' expenses it is no more than is being paid for in other counties and the moneys drawn have been legitimate as the books will show.

The first production of Goethe's "Faust" took place on the poet's 80th birthday, August 28, 1829, on the stage at Leipzig and at Dresden. Although the drama was continued in a second part by its author, it will always, probably, be ended in the popular mind with the sublime scenes which close the life of the unfortunate Marguerite. The comparison with the closing scenes of "King Lear" is obvious; but the simple, heartrending pathos of the last scenes in Gretchen's life, her shameful death and final salvation, remain almost without a parallel in any literature.

All Has Been Wrong.

It transpires now that the democratic state platform adopted at Grand Rapids, laying down the law for primary reform, and all of the speeches of Mr. Ferris, and his supporters interpreting that law, and the discussion of the Scripps papers amplifying it—all have been wrong, and that the real meaning and true method of primary reform have been unknown until now. According to that platform and those interpretations and amplifications, primary reform was a method to secure the widest freest privilege of any aspirant for office to present himself for the suffrages of his fellow citizens, without restraint from any packed caucus or party boss, and the fullest and freest privilege of the citizen to cast his vote for whatever candidate he desired, without interference of any manipulated convention or corrupt machine. It was so secure direct nomination by the people of such candidates as the people might prefer, without any artificial restraints or interference whatever.

But it now transpires that that is all a misapprehension, and that the whole instruction of the present campaign has been wrong. Hon. J. W. Helme of Adrian, who was the sole democratic member of the state senate four years ago, defines the primary method and presents it in an entirely new aspect, in an article in the Michigan Patron, which is deemed of such importance that it is given great prominence in the Detroit Tribune and in the Free Press, in advance of its appearance in the grange paper. The Tribune conceals Mr. Helme's connection with the article and credits it to the grange; but the Free Press had given away the fact of authorship the day before.

One of the radical departures in Mr. Helme's article from all previous instruction is a great limitation of the right of candidates to be voted for, requiring that for state candidates there should first be petitions signed by at least 200 voters from each of twenty different counties; and for county candidates petitions by 100 voters from each of five towns and wards, before a name could be placed upon the ballot to be voted for. This amounts to a reversal of the whole idea as it had been presented before, and prescribes limitations against the common rights to aspire for office and against the freedom of choice by the voters, greater than existed under the old system. It is a complete abandonment of the position on which the war against the republican party has been waged in this campaign, a confession of doubt and uncertainty and apprehension as to the operation of the primary method, and a revelation that the ideas of its extreme advocates are far from being so crystallized as to fit them for framing a law to apply it to the state.

The republican position is more definite, more liberal in submitting the choice to the unrestricted wish of the voters, more prudent and practical in proposing its trial in the counties and districts, to discover its merits and demerits, and the conditions of its wisest application, before extending it to the state nominations, rather than do this first and then find costly occasion for such floundering and speculating and experimenting as we now see.

Senator Burrows comments upon the Roosevelt and Ferris fable: "If any man proposes to couple those names on his ballot," he said, "it is a proposition to vote for a man for governor who, if either I or my colleague, Senator Alger, should fall by the way, would appoint a man for the vacancy who would fight Roosevelt and defeat his patriotic purposes. What kind of a Roosevelt man is that?"
